

Team Questions: Learning about Generations at Work

Team Questions: Learning about Generations at Work

I made this slide deck for you and your team to use by asking questions and listening to each other. This is how we create emotional glue (and build trust) on our teams.

As many of us continue to work from home, this is also a great time to practice our story telling skills in lieu of checking in on each other at the coffee pot or water cooler.

Show a slide and give each person 90 seconds to answer each question. The answers, as you'll come to see, will have a significant impact on how you understand each other even as we work virtually.

What did dinner time look like with your family growing up?

Photo by Stefan Vladimirov on Unsplash

What did your parents teach you about the value of work?

Photo by Ilse Orsel on Unsplash

How did your teachers discipline you in school?

Photo by Felipe Schiarolli on Unsplash

How did you do research when you were in elementary school?

Library?
Internet?
Encyclopedia?

How has communication and technology evolved in your lifetime?

Photo by Sebastien LE DEROUT on Unsplash

Let's stay connected!

I'd love to hear what you learned about each other, and even more, how you feel about your team after doing this.

Lindsay@LindsayBoccardo.com

@lindsayboccardo